TEMPTED TO CHEAT ONLINE?

It may be taboo to admit to even momentarily lusting after another person while in a committed relationship, but the temptation in everyday life is real.

The Ashley Madison hack showed us all that. So what are some ways we can be in more control of our urges while in a committed relationship?

Experts have 9 tips to help avoid giving in to the temptation to cheat:

Make sure you and your partner have the same definitions and expectations when it comes to relationships and cheating. According to Theresa Lyons, a matrimonial lawyer with a master's degree in social work, continuous communication is an important part of any relationship. It's not enough to set boundaries and guidelines at the beginning of a

Trust your spouse or partner with confidential information. If your long-term committed partner is not willing to share passwords, usernames and IDs with you, that could be a sign of trouble because full trust isn't there.

For some couples, temptation is eliminated if both partners have access to each other's information at all times, Lyons said.

Pay attention to the small decisions you make that can lead you down a slippery slope, Lyons said. For example, a small chat with an attractive man or woman could spiral out of control if you continually make choices throughout the conversation that could lead to a greater crisis, such as cheating on your partner. 2) Pay attention to the small decisions you make that can lead you down a slippery slope, Lyons said. For example, a small chat with an attractive man or woman could spiral out of control if you continually make choices throughout the conversation that could lead to a greater crisis, such as cheating on your partner.

Realize that technology is a powerful tool that can both help and harm marriages. Digital infidelity is very similar to non-digital infidelity — in both cases, at least one partner is engaging in pleasure-seeking activities without the other partner's knowledge, Lyons added.

Digital infidelity may include secret emailing, texting and video communication, which could all eventually lead to flesh-to-flesh contact.

Be understanding of the human factor. Instead of trying to hold your partner hostage, leave some room for your partner to be human and make mistakes. This recommendation comes from Yvanka De Ridder, a clinical sexologist, and marriage and family therapist. Even after creating guidelines and boundaries, people still make mistakes, because we're all only human after all. Be reasonable with your boundaries and do your best to respect each other.

Be prepared to put time and effort into your relationship. In fact, De Ridder believes that marriage or relationships, in general, do require work — they won't come naturally all the time. This is especially true when you have multiple responsibilities, such as your career, family and children.

Schedule date nights regularly. Don't assume that the same passion and intimacy will always exist in a relationship without any effort, she said. Make sure you actually go through with date nights consistently, as well.

Try couples therapy. You don't have to have issues to benefit from therapy. De Ridder stated. In fact, going to therapy can help prevent seemingly minor issues from growing into deal breakers. Preventing any major relationship problems from brewing can help both partners avoid infidelity. Some major issues that could contribute to infidelity, if left untouched, include resentment, loneliness, and the lack of intimacy and support.

Evaluate your personal relationships outside of marriage or your long-term committed relationship. It's natural to seek attention from other human beings, but just make sure the attention you need outside of your romantic relationship is appropriate, De Ridder said.

Sometimes your intentions may be right, but in a moment of weakness, you could follow through with interactions outside of your relationship that end up potentially ruining your trust with your partner.

6 LESSONS YOU CAN LEARN FROM HER SEX TOYS

So, your lady is using sex toys. We can see how this might feel threatening—like she’s replacing you with a better, battery-operated alternative.

But if she’s really into her vibrator, it doesn’t mean she isn’t getting enough from you.

Words: Arielle Pardes
Pics: Thinkstock

THE CLASSIC

1 A good vibrator is like a Volvo: dependable, powerful, and a reliable way to get from point A to point O. If she's using something electric, like the Hitachi Magic Wand, then you know she's definitely into the power," says Sadie Allison, Ph.D., author of The Mystery of the Undercover Clitoris. Allison says women are attracted to the variety in a classic multispeed vibrator: She can speed up, slow down, and vary the pressure until she's right there. The takeaway: It's not all about hitting one speed. Start slow and easy before you rev up and build toward climax. You can diversify your intensity, too, by alternating between hard-and-fast pumps and the slow-and-gentle kind.

THE RABBIT

3 Named for their two-pronged bunny-ear shape, rabbit vibrators are designed to hit two spots at once—like Lelo's Soraya dual-action vibrator, which stimulates both the clitoris and the G-spot simultaneously. These are the Ferraris of sex toys: they have all the power of a classic vibe, with twice the intensity. The takeaway: Bring it to the next level by stimulating more than one spot at a time. If your lady is using her toy both internally and externally, it's a sign to "pay more attention to her needs and focus on giving her pleasure all over her body," says Kathryn Catney, a representative from Lelo. During oral sex, use your tongue to hit her clitoris while your fingers find her G-spot; during intercourse, enter from behind while you reach around to push her pleasure button.

THE DILDO

4 Sometimes, sex toys are straightforward, like the dildo. Typically large and phallic-shaped, it's the closest thing to a "replacement penis" out there. But before you get huffy about being swapped for a synthetic lookalike, remind yourself that the girl who uses a dildo likes the same type of equipment you already have. The difference? She can control it. "If she has a dildo, that means she really likes penetration," says Allison. Look closely at her dildo of choice, Allison says—specifically, the size and the shape.

The takeaway: If her dildo is pornstar-huge, don't get a bruised ego. This could just be an indication that she likes super-deep penetration—and that's a win-win for both of you. No matter the size, let her be in charge of controlling the thrusts. That way, she can maneuver you around just how she likes.

AROUSAL OILS

5 There are sex toys, and then there are sex oils. We're talking about the tingling, tantalizing gels and lubes that can take pleasure up a notch by making her ultra-sensitive down there. A woman who puts this much effort into the preparation definitely enjoys a big payoff in the end. The takeaway: Don't skimp on the foreplay. Whether it's giving her oral or manual stimulation or just playing with the oils themselves, make sure her engine is hot before you start.

OVER HALF OF WOMEN HAVE USED SEX TOYS, SO THERE'S A GOOD CHANCE SHE'S GOT ONE STASHED SOMEWHERE IN HER DRAWER.

THE BULLET VIBE

2 If she's using a bullet vibrator—one of those small, thumb-sized vibes shaped like a bullet shell—then she's definitely targeting her clitoris. Crammed with thousands of nerve-endings, the clitoris is a one-way ticket to orgasm, so it's not surprising that lots of women focus here. Similarly, she might be using a vibe like Jimmyjane's Form 3 or the Minna Limon, which are shaped to cover the clitoris and the surrounding area. The takeaway: Rather than going straight to thrusting, spend some time giving TLC to her clitoris. Try warming her up with a little clitoral play, and move into sex positions that hit her C-spot, like woman-on-top or missionary with your hips tilted forward.

SEX TOYS FOR COUPLES

6 If she's already using solo sex toys, she'll likely love trying them with a partner—a.k.a. you. "Men are becoming more open to using toys in the bedroom, and surprisingly more couples than singles tend to buy our products," says Catney. According to a 2014 survey by Lelo, 72 percent of sex toy owners use them with their partners. The takeaway: Find a favorite toy to use together.

Den Boers

She is known as a DStyle, soon to be DutchDJ, but she grew up as Deedee Den Boers, an experienced model from Europe, who seen international success in her career. She knows modeling does not last forever, and so she spends a lot of her free time preparing for her next stage in life.

Netherlands?

Yes, I am European, but not the traditional European model people think of. It's who I am, and I have all my family here. I have dreams of moving to the U.S., but that distance from my family might be a little hard.

Start?

I started into modeling on my 18th birthday. I couldn't do anything before then, but once I turned 18, I was going full speed. I did a lot of training and became hooked. I was lucky, and got some great connections early on. Soon I was traveling all over.

Accomplishment?

I've luckily been published in some international Playboy publications. I've also been selected to some U.S. modeling searches including the International Bikini Model Search and Swimsuit USA.

Advice?

I feel new models are easily persuaded into doing things they might not feel strong about. I am a DJ. I am a DutchDJ. I am honing my skills all the time, and hope to start the transition from modeling into DJing over the next few years. When I think of moving to the U.S., I think of seeing if I can make my mark as a DJ there.

BAE
WATCH

A woman with long, wavy blonde hair is sitting in the open driver's side door of a bright yellow sports car. She is wearing a red one-piece swimsuit with the words "BAE" and "WATCH" printed in white. She is also wearing red high-heeled sandals with multiple straps. Her arms are raised, and she is looking towards the camera. The background shows a clear sky and some distant structures.

SEX WITH A NEW PARTNER: HOW TO START YOUR ADVENTURE WITH A BANG

You've made it past the third date or the Tinder matchup, and it's time, time to have sex with a new partner. So remember, keep these things in mind.

WHonestly, most of the time when I have sex with a guy for the first time, I'll accidentally hit them in the balls or queef – that's all I can do. Don't ask me if they ever call me again, you're evading the point.

Having sex with a new partner is exciting because you want to explore them, however, it's also terrifying. You're trying to see if you two sexually connect, while also figuring out what they like and don't like in bed.

Let's just say, as fun as it is, it's also overwhelming. Now, I'm not saying that these tips will get you the best sex, that's up to you and your partner. But, these tips will help you enjoy the experience and calm you down since you'll be prepared.

What you should do when having sex with a new partner

Let's face it – having sex with a new partner is usually not a scene out of a Hollywood movie. We all want it to be, but come on, this is real life. And it can be a little more messy and complicated. But don't worry, keep these things in mind, and you'll be just fine.

#1 Get the hygiene down. You're going to be

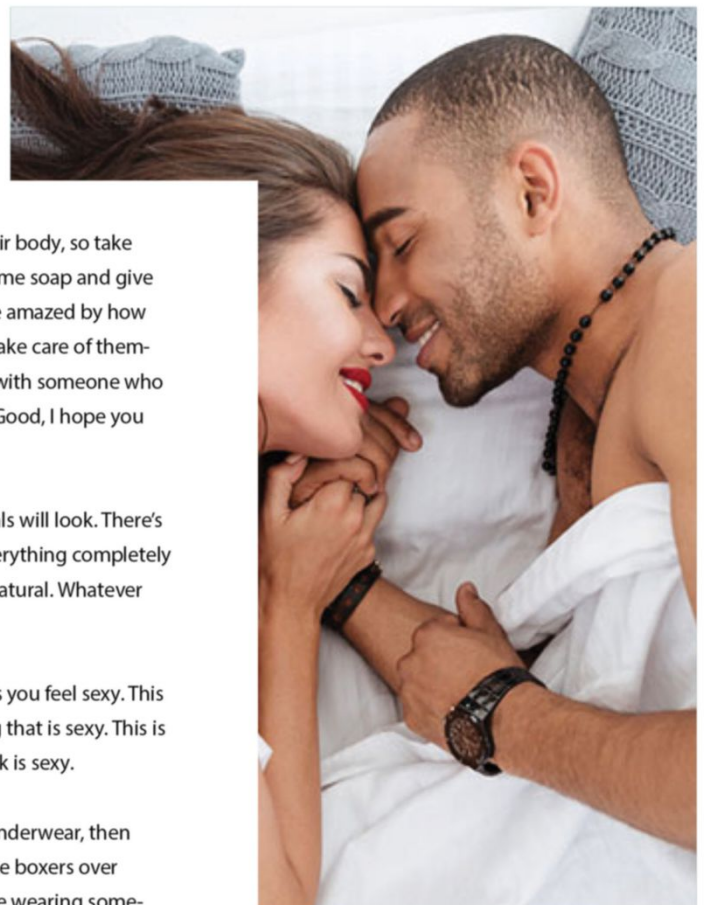

rubbing your body against their body, so take an extra five minutes to use some soap and give yourself a good scrub. You'll be amazed by how people appreciate those that take care of themselves. Have you ever had sex with someone who hasn't showered in two days? Good, I hope you never have to. It's traumatic.

#2 You decide how your genitals will look. There's this battle between having everything completely waxed/shaved and leaving it natural. Whatever you choose, is your choice.

#3 Wear something that makes you feel sexy. This doesn't mean, wear something that is sexy. This is purely based on what you think is sexy.

If you feel sexy wearing blue underwear, then wear blue underwear. If you like boxers over briefs, wear the boxers. If you're wearing something you feel hot in, you'll show more confidence, and you'll be more open and relaxed in bed.

#4 Have protection. Whether you're the man or woman, you should always take responsibility and carry your own protection. You shouldn't rely on your partner to have protection because, well, there will be moments when they won't have any. So, carry an extra condom in your wallet or purse

NICE TO KNOW!

#5 Choose your beauty standards. You don't have to have a face full of makeup to have sex with a new partner. You also don't have to go completely natural either. You decide how you want to look.

You don't have to wear a nurse outfit to impress your partner or gel your hair back to look straight out of GQ. Who gives a shit. This person is having sex with you, so they obviously find you attractive anyway. Don't sweat it.

#6 Keep up with communication. You're not having sex with yourself. You're having sex with another person. And because there's two of you, you're going to have to check-in with them and see if they're okay.

Ask them if they like what you're doing, etc. Now, don't ask all the time or else it gets annoying, but if you're unsure, ask.

#7 Don't expect anything. Don't expect your first time to be amazing. Don't expect it to be shitty either. For most of us, it takes us a couple times to understand our partner, what they like, and what they don't like. So, if there's a sexual connection between you two, the sex will be good. It just might not be mind-blowing, but, that'll take time.

#8 Slow and steady. Don't jump the gun. I mean, if you guys were making out at the club for hours, then I understand. But, if not, take your time and really focus on foreplay.

Explore each other's bodies, taste each other, and take in every moment. Quickies are all fine and good, but, the real passionate sex is when it's hot, messy, and sensual. That takes time.

#9 Laugh off awkward moments. If you accidentally let out a fart, or miss their mouth when you're trying to kiss them, just play it off. They're not caring and if anything, if you have a laugh.

It'll show that you're not taking it too seriously, and that'll make you both relaxed. You should always be having a laugh when having sex.

#10 Breathe. You need to take a deep breath and relax. This isn't some competition, this is sex. You're supposed to be having fun and enjoying the moment. So, don't think about the future, like if he/she will want to see you again... who cares? Live in the moment and enjoy their body.

#11 Bring the lube. If you're a woman, even though you want to have sex, you may be so nervous that you won't be able to become wet. That being said, you'll want to carry a small bottle of lube with you in your purse. Also, you don't know, maybe he's well-endowed. And in that case, you'll be praying you brought lube with you.

#12 Don't focus on the orgasm. Sex is purely psychological. So, you don't want to focus so much on trying to have an orgasm. That's not the point of having sex. I mean, of course, it's great if you have one, but it shouldn't be your main goal. If you make it the main goal, you'll lose the moment that you're sharing with this person.
